Hongkong, September 9th, 1875.

Some few days since we published an count of the manner in which Mr. F. W. RICHARDSON, Judge of the United States Court of Claims, Yokohama, and Commander | Sect. 72, sub. 11, of 13 of 1873. The plaintif Lewis, U.S. Navy, were turned back from a projected excursion into the country. They left Yokohama with the intention of visiting Hachoii and return by way of Miagase. They were, of course, properly provided with passes from the United States Legation, and never for a moment imagined that their journey would be interfered with. But they were destined to meet one of those men who. "dressed in a little brief authority," render their tenure of it more uncertain by losing no possible opportunity of displaying and often of exaggerating their power. Such a character the local authority at Hachoji appears to be. He informed the American gentlemen that they had no right to visit the place, and could not for a moment be induced to listen to argument. Vain was the production of passes; he would have nothing to say to them; he would do nothing allowed to proceed to Mingase, but this re-So a watch was placed over them until the following morning, when they were escorted back by the police to Yokohama, where they were taken to the police head-quarters and appearance. The policemen who accompanied them interrogated them as to their names and positions in a most insulting manner, and still further humiliated them by appealing to the constable of the United States Consulate for confirmation of their assertions. As a matter of course, they only submitted to these proceedings from a feeling of necessity, and took the first opportumity to lay the case before their Consul, requesting him to take it up. Mr. BINGHAM, the U.S. Consul, lost no time | solved.

SUMMARY JURISDICTION

BEFORE MR. JUSTICE SNOWDEN. THE "SCOTLAND" AND HER CHARTERER. W. H. TAYLOR v. JAMES, $420.—His Lordhip now gave judgment in this case as follows: -This action is brought to recover $420, alleged. plaintiff as a commission of 1 per cent, in consideration of his procuring a charter for the steamship Soutland for three months, at $14,000 per month. The defendant left Hongkong some weeks ago, and it is to be regretted that the action has to proceed in his absence. There can be, however, no doubt from the cvidence. before me that the defendant was induced to make this promise, and that he verbally approwhich the charterer, Ayon, paid him as a gratuity. There was no failure of consideration; the | ment Writ on Tuesday. charter was obtained; the voyage was finished; but, on settlement of accounts, disputes arose. Ayon, amongst other things sought to recover back from Captain James the $1,000 gratuity for some ground or another. This difference formed the subject of an arbitration. The arbitrators gave an award in favor of Captain James, Captain James thus received the money out of which he promised to pay the plaintiff I one per cent, commission. There must be therefore, a verdict for the plaintiff. But there is a further question under the garnishee clause. has attached money in the bands of Messrs. Turner and Co., which he says belongs to the owners of the Scotland. This money was recovered by Captain James from Ayon in this Court for the use of the Scotland for our day over and above the three months for which she was chartered, and was handed over by Mr. Toller, who appeared as counse on behalf of the owners, to Turner & Co., the agents of the ship. The only ground on which the Court would order the garnishees to pay this money to the present plaintiff would be the ground that the defendant promised to give the plaintiff this I per cent. commission on behalf of the owners. After considering the evidence, and especially the correspondence. cannot consider that this promise was made by James was captain of the Scotland, and, as such, labour each. agent of the owners for certain purposes. THE END OF THE WORLD AT HAND A correspondent, under the signature of "A Prophetic Dreamer," writes a long letter on the above succeed to the Madras Athenoun, which concludes as follows:-To enter into details would not suit the columns of a newspaper, -but perhaps, a few words may not be out place. Suffice it to eny, that accepting the ancient and universal tradition, that the six days of creation, typified 6,000 years of 360 days or 2,160,000 days as the duration of the world's dispensation, and reducing them to true solar years, they amount to 5,913 years and 323 days, and by adopting the Jewish computation of time, as explained by the cycle of XIX. (the most perfect of all systems), dating creation from the 4th day, when the sun and the moon were placed in the heavens, the muon being at its full the 15th of the first month, and about the time of the autumnal equinox, the termina-tion of this period will fall about the 27th of January, A.M. 5914, and if we follow the Biblical chronology in its entirety, it will be found to place the Christian era at the close of A.M. 4028, and the corresponding date will fall, on or about 30th July A.D. 1886. Of conrec, exactness in this date is impossible. The various lengths of the year of uncient nations, the precision of the equinoxes and other causes, will all make a difference; but if the writer's theory be correct, there can be no mistake as the termination of the 6,000 years being in A.M. 5914; and that this corresponds with A.D. 1886, or thereabouts, the present state of Europe and its political events go far to corroborate; all of which tend to the conviction that the 70th week of Daniel's celebrated prophecy, the granted periode of 7 Times, 2,300 days, &c., are on the eve of their complete ! fulfilment; even at our very doors."-Madras

A MAN WITHOUT A NATIONALITY. The Russian journals have lately been much taken up with the troubles which bave befallen. a young man in consequence of his failure to es-tablish his nationality. After a fruitless endeavour to obtain employment and a home, the young man at the end of a fortnight crossed the Russian frontier, and was arrested at Kratingen, where, in answer to inquiries, he gave as his name that of his father, and described himself. as a native of St. Petersburg. He was thereupon conveyed to the capital, and imprisoned at Spask. After being detained here a mouth he was a second time sent off to Memel, where he received the same information as before from the mayor, and was ordered to quit the town at once. Again, therefore, he crossed the frontier, and made his way unchallenged to Libiu, where be was arrested and consigned to prison. After a detention of seven months he was once more escorted to St. Petersburg by the police and imprisoned at Spack. His friends at length succeeded in obtaining his release, but not til he had been tried and fined five roubles for assuming a name (his father's) to which he had voclaim. They strove in vain, bowever, to procure him a passport, and again the police escorted him. to Memel, where he of course met with the same reception as previously from the mayor. Under the circumstances, therefore, he had no other choice than to venture upon Russian territory once more, and was promptly apprehended at Kraten, reconducted to St. Petersburg, and ingain consigned to the Spask prison for three months. At the end of this time, he was liberated and provided with a passport. Here, however, his trouble did not end. A fourth expedition to Memel followed, with results as before. For the fourth time he was arrested on the frontier and conveyed to prison at St. Petersburg. During his journey the unfortunate man, with the hope of being sont to Siberia, contrived to smash the window of a shop, for the purpose, as he alleged, of committing a theft. The expedient, however, failed, and for the fifth time he found himself on his way back to Memel. On seeing him appear once more, the mayor, in a passion, had bim thrust from the door, and in 1874 Nicholas was again in the hands of the Russian police. The St. Petersburg Gazette, from which the above particulars are taken, has not patience to follow up the further peregrinations of the unfortunate young man, but says that they comprised two more involuntary THE Interest and Responsibility of Mr. visits to the mayor of Memel. MR. COLLINS' CROQUET SET. costly materials .- Letters from China and Croquet, that eminently fascinating game. was introduced on the premises of the Collins' on Friday. In the afternoon Podge's boy brought up the set, and just before tea, Mrs. Collins arranged the wickets. Collins had learned to play when visiting-in-Glovershire, last Summer, and Mrs. Collins acquired an indifferent knowledge of the game from two elderly maiden sisters in Paxton-street. And so on that delicious Friday afternoon they took out their mallets and balls and com-

"You are always thinking of me." said she, as her eyes grew moist. "You need the out-door air as much as I do, but you are too unselfish to think of yourself." And thus exchanging sentiments which did credit to both their hearts, the game progressed. - After passing through the centre wicket, Mr. Collins used her balls to help kimself through the other wicket to the upper stake. Then he left her near the first wicket, and struck for the stake, which, being abouteight inches distant, made him confident. The ball on at the public-house, helding "crack" and missed by about an eighth of an inch.

"I declare!" he exclaimed, in vexation. Then she, having watched his rapid progress, now struck for him and hit him, and a minute later his ball was spinning through the grass to the other and of the ground. She was now in position for her wicket, and passed through it and the others to the stake, but missed it. Then he came up by a veltedirected blow to within two inches of the stake. But she went for him again, and when she got through she was three wickets beyond the stake, and his ball was at the other end of the ground again, and his brow was finely corrugated. He stepped nervously toward it. It was quite evident that he was of invalide, some eighty in number, all old not unruffled. When his turn came again he drove back to the stake, but struck a wicket: and rebounded so close to her that she easily hit him, and again introduced him through | Militia were disaffected, and in all probawickets he was not for, and then sent him

Until about the middle of last century the roads of the country were in a wretched state. Instead of wheeled carriages, pack horses, and in some cases sledges, were used for between Ambleside and Grasmere. Then there is the old story about the first lime ever taken into Borrowdale. It was, so the story goes, conveyed thither in a sack, on the back of a horse, and when the man i charge of it got as far as Grange Bridge a heavy thunder shower came on, and the lime began to smoke and grow hot in the sack. To stop this be poured some water on it. which he brought in his hat from the beck, which increased the smoke so much that, thinking there must be some devilry in smoke which was increased by water, he took fright, threw load into the beck, and galloped home. Here, as elsewhere, most of the travelling used to be performed on horseback. A man and his wife often rode to market together on the same horse—the woman sitting behind on what was called a pillion. But the Dalesmen were by no means particular about the appearance of their turn-out. A piece of turf dried and cut into the proper shape was frequently used for a saddle. In other cases what was called a "pad" was used, which was made of straw. Sometimes, on market days, after business was over, such of the farmers as were convivially disposed staved drinking until a late hour. Not much skill or labour was bestowed on making a plough. It was nothing unusual for a tree to be growing in the morning, to be cut down during the day, and made into a plough with which a good stroke of work was done before night

CARLISLE CASTLE On the advance of the Highlanders in 1745 the castle was found utterly unprepared to stand a siege. From the records of the court-martial held afterwards upon Colonel Durand for surrendering the place, it appears that the garrison consisted of two companies and infirm men, four gunners, two of whom were townsmen, and two old soldiers, but one of them a very old and infirm man; that the bility only deterred from supporting Charles flying again. Her success caused her to Edward by their national hatred for his Scotch supporters - that the castle and city walls were in a ruinous condition and utterly "You'll have to play better than you have guns, all 6-pounders, while ten only were available for the city walls, ranging in calibre from 2 to 4-pounders.
